DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Carter Double House Ruin is located several hundred yards downstream from the old paper mill ruins on the west bank of the Little Elk Creek. The house is situated between the stream and a steep wall of the valley. The facade of this dwelling faces the stream and has two entrances in the central bay. This ruin is three bays long by two bays deep. In each gable wall is a stone end chimney. The house looks as though it was two stories in height with an attic. It had a gable roof. During its useful lifetime the exterior walls were stuccoed. Much of this has worn off revealing the stonework of the house. The stones were laid in rough rubble fashion. To the west of the house is a small spring which has had some stones placed about it to prevent it from becoming filled in. This structure is a similar th other double houses in Cecil County which were built during the early 19th century.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Carter Double House Ruin is a picturesque stone ruin a short distance downstream from the Carter Paper Mill. It was probably used for some time as a dwelling by people who were involved in the local paper industry. Due to the number of improvements made in this area by Robert Carter after his arrival in 1814 it seems highly likely that this building was built by him or his company.
